Today's learning is a grammar activity.

These sentences about The Great Fire of London are written in the present tense.

We would like you to rewrite them in the past tense.

e.g. It is September 1666.

It was September 1666.

The fire starts in a bakery on Pudding Lane.

Thomas Farynor works in the bakery.

It has been a dry, hot summer.

The houses are built very close together.

The family climbs onto the roof to escape.

The people flee the city in boats and carts.

People use squirts and leather buckets to try to put out the fire.

Fire men blow up houses to try to stop the fire from spreading.

St Paul's cathedral burns down during the fire.

Thankfully, not many people die because of the fire.

Please rewrite the first five sentences and do the rest if you have time.
